Target version:	RA1: Analysis of artifacts in synthetic speech
Description Basic forms of foreign words are typically transcribed correctly, but the transcription (and hence the synthesized pronunciation) in some less usual forms or in compounds is incorrect. This concerns mostly two things: 1) alveolar/palatal alternation (t/T, n/J) - mezietský, ekumenická - agramatický, psychoakustický, aortický 2) hiatus, i.e., when two vowels meet a) [j] is often not defined in derived word forms, and often a glottal stop is inserted (though it is not in the transcription) - word forms of patriarchální, archaický, prozaický, nebiologický, biotopický, idey, lyceum, hyenovitý b) insertion of glottal stop - poetika, poetický and their forms + another isolated example: filosofický, filosofie are correct, but filosofická/é yields [s] instead of [z]
